More rain and snow expected in the forecast

John Manconi, the city's public works general manager, told council almost 600 pieces of equipment had been in action all night on snow clearance, which will continue throughout the weekend so that the accumulation doesn't block water drainage. Environment Canada issued a rainfall warning Thursday, predicting about 25 millimetres total of sometimes-heavy rain by Friday morning before tapering off to showers during the day and periods of snow near midnight.

 Ashcroft development will include open space accessible to the public

Ottawa city council decided to accept $1 million Thursday from the developer of the Sisters of the Visitation convent in Westboro in lieu of parkland — a move that raised the ire of some local residents. Of the $1 million, $600,000 is to go to expanding and improving park-

The city had considered buying a portion of the land from Ashcroft Homes, which plans to build two condo towers, a seniors' residence and other buildings on the site, to maintain as parkland. This would have required local residents to pay a special levy to pay for the pur-

Kitchissippi Coun. Katherine Hobbs convened six public meetings on the issue. "We got a lot of feedback and the majority was overwhelmingly opposed to paying a levy," she said, as one woman opposed to the cash-in-lieu deal heckled her.

Gary Ludington, chair of the Westboro Community Association, said his group heard from many supporters of the levy. He questioned where the city could spend Ashcroft's money in the fast-growing urban ward.

"The problem is there's no land to purchase for parks," he said.

"It doesn't matter how much money you've got if you're not going to go and purchase the land or take the land from developers, we're getting less and less green space."

MARZANNA BEDNAREK-ZILINSKAS, CHARGE TECHNOLOGIST, OTTAWA HOSPITAL

The Ottawa Hospital expects to boost the accuracy of breast cancer diagnoses and cut wait times with two new digital mammography machines, thanks in part to a donation from TELUS' Go Pink campaign.

TELUS, which announced last May that it would donate $25 from every pink BlackBerry sold to hospitals across Canada,

The digital machines are better at penetrating dense breast tissue to detect smaller tumours earlier, and can handle four patients an hour, up from three with traditional X-ray machines, said Guy Morency, the hospital's director of medical imaging.

NHL injuries worry PM

Prime Minister Stephen Harper says he is concerned about the growing number of serious injuries in the NHL.

An avid hockey fan, Harper says the league needs to take a serious look at the issue.

No spring forward for Sask.

Time is going to stand still in Saskatchewan — or at least the clocks won't be changing.

The government said Thursday that it will not hold a promised referendum on daylight time in conjunction with a provincial election in November.

Saskatchewan Municipal Affairs Minister Darryl Hickie said a recent poll shows that two-thirds of just over 1,000 people surveyed oppose making the switch.

Sponsor Air Canada wants action on violence after brutal headshot

NHL commissioner Gary Bettman says there's no need to "over-legislate" head hits.

Speaking after a U.S. congressional panel discussion Thursday on encouraging American kids to get into hockey, Bettman pointed to a trend.

"The rise in concussions in the preliminary data from this season seem to be coming from accident events, collisions, players falling and banging into other things, not from head hits," he told reporters.

The issue has been front and centre this season, especially this week in the wake of Max Pacioretty being hospitalized with a severe concussion and fractured vertebra. The Montreal forward was slammed into a stanchion

Violence intensifies for rebels

• Gadhafi forces pound rebels with rockets, shelling Civilians and mutinous army units forced to retreat

With fierce barrages of tank and artillery fire, Moammar Gadhafi's loyalists threw rebels into a frantic retreat from a strategic oil port Thursday, using overwhelming force in a counteroffensive that reversed the opposition's advance toward the capital Tripoli and now threatens its positions in the east.

Hundreds of rebels in cars and trucks mounted with machine-guns sped eastward on the Mediterranean coastal road as rockets and shells pound-

Cop under scrutiny in Assange case

Julian Assange's Swedish lawyer says a newspaper report casts doubt on whether the sex abuse investigation against the WikiLeaks founder was carried out in an impartial manner.

Swedish tabloid Expressen reported Thursday that a police officer involved in the initial phase of the probe had personal and political links to one of the two women accusing Assange of sexual misconduct.

Expressen also said the officer, Irmeli Krans, described Assange as a "bubble ready to burst" on her personal Facebook

If true, Assange's lawyer says, a trial could be unfair.

MINUTES WITH: M WATSON

Ottawa Mayor Jim Watson marked his first 100 days in office vesterday.

How important is the 100-day mark to you?

I think over the years it's become more of a media fixation: the media will pick the first 100 days of the mayor, premier, prime minister and so on. I think it pushes all of us in politics to not coast for those first hundred days and live in a bit of a honeymoon period, but actually deliver something.

The first 100 days is considered to be when you can most easily get things

Yeah, to a certain degree. but I think one of the things I've tried to do and what I think a lot of people around here have appreciated is there's a much more co-operative approach. And that's not great news for reporters, because you miss some of the fireworks that used to go on, but I think the public sent a pretty clear signal that they wanted a different tone and a different style.

There does seem to be an allergy to controversy around here. I've heard you described as a "story-killing robot from the future."

(Laughs) Oh really? I hadn't heard that. Sorry about

How do you keep that co-op erative atmosphere?

There probably hasn't been a day gone by in the last hundred days that I'm not down visiting the councillors, which the returning members tell me is something new. They didn't often see the mayor. Often I'll have meetings in their boardrooms or offices, just keeping the lines of communications open. It's the old Holiday Inn expression: "No surprises." Surprise me with something we don't know about you. I like going to movies on my own. I find that in this job you're surrounded by people all the time. I live near the Coliseum on Carling Avenue, and I'll just go there and watch a movie and sit there on my own. Now, a couple of times people have come by and they've seen me sitting there on my own with a bag of popcorn and a Diet Coke, and I can just tell they're thinking, this guy's a real loser and he's the mayor. But it's actually my one little escape to sort of relax, recharge the batteries and see sometimes a good film. So your escape from crowds is in a crowd? Yeah (laughs), but it's a dark

The pattern of aging in humans is not too different from most other primates, such as chimpanzees, monkeys and baboons, new research shows. A team led by Anne Bronikowski of Iowa State University studied data on primate aging collected over decades around the world and compared it with statistics on modern Americans. Some experts have thought that because people have relatively long lifespans, humans aged differently from other mam-

The research team believed that any major difference between humans and primates was most likely to show up with modern people, rather than a hunter-gatherer culture, Bronikowski

"And the fact that we don't find a difference there is more compelling."

The basic pattern they found is a relatively high risk of dying in infancy, a low risk of death during the juvenile years and then an increased risk of dying as aging progressed. Also, they found that in most cases males don't live as long as females.

"Human patterns are not strikingly different, even though wild primates experience sources of mortality from which humans may be protected," the authors wrote in a study published online Thursday in the journal Science. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RICHARD CROUSE & MARK BRESLIN

A fun trip to Mars

Richard Crouse and Mark Breslin debate the merits of Mars Needs Moms • Action-adventure story lifts animated film, but not quite to WALL-E's level

Richard Crouse: Mark. I think WALL-E is the pinnacle of science fiction for kids and after seeing Mars Needs Moms ... I still feel that way. It's not really scifi anyway, it's more action-adventure in zero gravity, and a pretty good one. But despite some good animation it didn't feel memorable to me. What did you think?

Breslin: Well, Richard, I dreaded seeing it. To fully appreciate this picture, you have to be an eight-year-old boy, and my inner child ran away from home a long time ago. But I was pleasantly surprised — and a bit angry. The poster and title indicate that the movie is a comedy for little kids. But it's not. Parents of very young children should be aware that it is an action-adventure, as you say, with themes about kidnapping and abandon-ment, and some scary chase scenes

RC: I too dreaded having to sit through this, a feeling that didn't go away until the story really kicked in around the half-hour mark. The Earth-bound portion of the movie bored me silly but once the movie hits Mars it perks up. The female Martians look like ET's younger sisters and the animation is terrific. I think it will appeal to eight- or nine-yearolds, but as you say anyone younger than that might find it a bit intense

MB: I got into it as well. But I must say the animation unnerved me. It's getting to the point where the human characters looked creepily all too real, especially in longshot. On the other hand, it's nice to see John Candy working again.

RC: I can only half agree with you on the animation. I thought the backgrounds on Mars were spectacular, kind of 2001 by way of Triumph of the Will and Brazil, but, for me, the character animation fluctuated. Milo's mom had a not-quite-human feel about her, but Milo and his friend Gribble look amazing. And you're right about John Candy. I couldn't help but think that Dan Fogler's Gribble is the part Candy would have played if this film was made in 1990.

MB: Animated movies often entertain children and their parents in different ways and on different levels, but in this movie the pop culture references of the Pixar films or of Shrek are nonexistent. But I must admit I did laugh when Gribble's mechanical dog threw up nuts and

Pegg, Frost live out lifelong dream

▶ British comedy pair play comic book nerds on the search for aliens in Paul ◆ First Hollywood movie for stars of Shaun of the Dead and Hot Fuzz

It's time for Shaun Of The Dead and Hot Fuzz fans as well as all open and closeted nerds to rejoice. Simon Pegg and Nick Frost return next week with Paul.

The longtime friends and collaborators co-wrote and star in a new film about a pair of British comic book geeks who embark on a USA/UFO road trip from Comic-Con and end up befriending an alien. Despite having co-starred several times in film and television before, the movie marks the first time the pair have written together.

"Funnily enough, since

"I think that we've managed to hopefully write a love letter to Steven Spielberg and the fan boys on one hand and on the other hand make something which is slightly more accessible for everyone to watch, even women."

we met about 17, 18 years ago we always wrote little things together that never came to fruition," Pegg told Metro. "Paul was our chance to finally do something and finish it. It became a point of honour to get it done. There were days where we were literally apoplectic with laughter lying on the floor crying our eyes out over stuff that didn't even end up in the script."

The film also represents the first time the pair worked within the Hollywood studio system and though they admit that means they had to slightly curb their sensibilities to play to a broader audience, they were able to still maintain their distinct comedic voice.

"I always use the phrase, you mutate to survive," said Pegg with Frost jokingly adding, "I think that we've managed to hopefully write a love letter to Steven Spielberg and the fan boys on one hand and on the other hand make something which is slightly more accessible for everyone to watch, even women."

Though Paul should appeal to a wider crowd, Pegg and Frost know that their core fanbase shares their pop culture obsessions and certainly know how to appease them. In fact, when they debuted footage from Paul at last year's ComicCon there was actually a stabbing in the audience.

"They were fighting over seats at our panel," explained Pegg. "That was simultaneously horrifying and flattering."

McConaughey enjoyed playing the sleezy lawyer

It's been 15 years since Matthew McConaughey had his first major role in Joel Schumacher's 1996 thriller A Time to Kill. In that film, McConaughey played an idealistic young defence attorney with right on his side — a far cry from his role in Brad Furman's new legal drama The Lincoln Lawyer, where he's more of an opportunist than a crusader.

"You can get away with a bit more," says the 42-year-old actor when asked if the part of Los Angeles criminal defence attorney Mickey Haller — a guy who happily defends the guilty if the money is right — was appealing for him precisely because of its skeezier dimensions. "You can be Mr. In-Between. You can go left or right. You have more jokers up your sleeve. You're more free. It's fim."

Haller's character has his origins in a series of novels by Michael Connelly, but McConaughey says he didn't feel any pressure to live up to what was on the page.

"I didn't think about expectations. My initial thoughts were based on what Michael Connelly wrote, and then when it goes to script form, you obviously end up losing some of what's in the book. But I thought the essence was still there in the script, and Michael feels the same way, which is nice to hear. That's the best compliment I can give (the film)."

McConaughey says he was also very pleased with the film's soundtrack, which rolls '70s soul and contemporary hip-hop into one swaggering package. "(Director) Brad Furman

"(Director) Brad Furman has a really good ear for hip-hop. He wanted to go old-school, to get that feeling of the streets, and I loved that. This is not the usual soundtrack for these kinds of movies, and think it contemporizes the story while also making it a throwback. It's the sound of the streets, of downtown L.A."

Despite being a longtime Los Angeles resident, McConaughey says he was a little thrown by the hometown shoot. "Ninety per cent of the places we were at I'd never seen before." he laughs.

Battle: Los Angeles Genre: Action

Director: Jonathan Liebesman Stars: Aaron Eckhart, Ramon Rodriguez, Michelle Rodriguez

Battle: Los Angeles's producers are waging their bets that audiences will get a sadistic joy out of watching Hollywood burn.

After all, in this thriller, not only do heavily armed extraterrestrials conquer Earth, but the last fortress to withstand demolition is seemingly the California coastline - thanks mostly to a platoon of marines led by a serious but disgraced sergeant (Aaron Eckhart) seeking redemption.

As for plot, that's pret-ty much it. The thin premise (they're after our water, apparently), dodgy dialogue and flat supporting characters don't benefit this gung-ho war movie. In fact, it's a bit too Pearl Harbor with Martians in tone. However, the action truly does get a boost from tension shots from the soldiers' perspective, which makes this battle nothing if not worth its or people who simply hate L.A STEVE GOW

Red Riding Hood Genre: Thriller Director: Catherine Hardwicke Stars: Amanda Sevfried, Lukas Haas, Gary Oldman

On paper, turning Red Riding Hood into a glossy goth-ic horror movie isn't a bad idea. Unfortunately, beyond the impressive images the filmmakers didn't seem to know what to do with the concept. There's no point in a detailed plot description, because it doesn't make much sense. It involves a medieval town haunted by a big bad wolf, a disturbed monster hunter hired to slay the beast, and a pretty girl in a red hood with two generic love interests. O PHIL BROWN

Jim Carrey's performance in Glenn Ficarra and John Requa's fact-based comedy suggests Liar, Liar overlaid with melancholy. Playing a

Genre: Comedy Director: Miguel Arteta Stars: Ed Helms, John C. Reilly and Anne Heche

Cedar Rapids is best described as a Sundance comedy; a character-based movie that is not a laugh a minute. It's not even a laugh every five minutes, which is a shame given the talent involved. Ed Helms plays a small town schlub exposed to sex, drugs and rock 'n' roll at an insurance convention in the "big" city of Cedar Rapids. There's too much space between the funny bits to call this an outright comedy.

Before Twitter, Sheen did films

Let's go back to a happier, simpler time, when Charlie Sheen was known primarily as an actor, and not a multimedia motor mouth who's coined such instant catchphrases as "winning" and "tiger blood," and behaved so erratically that he lost his high-paying TV gig.

For a while there mostly in the '80s -Sheen made movies, like his father, Martin Sheen, and his brother, Emilio Estevez. Sure, he appeared in his share of idiotic comedies and action flicks, but he also delivered some strong roles and worked with some daring directors. So let's take a look at Sheen's five best performances — outside of his Twitter account or webcast Sheen's Korner, that is

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Platoon (1986)

Sheen is at the centre of Oliver Stone's Vietnam War epic — he's standing in for Stone, really — as a young man conflicted about war and his place in the world, while simultaneously being torn between two powerful superiors. The film is immediate, intense and visceral, the winner of four Academy Awards including best picture and best director. This, and the next film on the list. would make Sheen a superstar in the mid-1980s.

Wall Street (1987)

Sheen reunites with Stone for a movie that could not be more reflective of its place and time. He stars as Bud Fox, an ambitious, young stockbroker who's willing to do whatever he must to get to the top. Again, he's torn between two influential men: Michael Douglas in his Oscar-winning role as the greedy Gordon Gekko and Martin Sheen, who's also playing his on-screen father, a union leader who taught Bud to respect his blue-collar upbringing. Bud is intoxicated by his lavish new lifestyle.

Ferris Bueller's Day Off (1986)

He only had a brief part not nearly the screen time of star Matthew Broderick or even Alan Ruck as Ferris's best friend, Cameron. But he's a pivotal force in helping Jennifer Grey, as Ferris's frustrated sister, loosen up and let go of her jealousy. Sitting in a police station with messy hair and dark circles under his eyes, he's a dangerous delinquent but also kind of sexy. Appropriately, the first word he utters to her is, "Drugs?" But by the end, he's got Grey making out with him.

Eight Men Out (1988)

John Sayles' film about how the 1919 Chicago White Sox threw the World Series is probably the best movie ever made about baseball. It's intelligent, detailed and earnest, but it may not be for everyone, since it is literally so inside baseball. Still, it placed Sheen among a tremendous ensemble cast, featuring John Cusack, David Strathairn and John Mahoney. He played centre fielder Oscar "Hap" Felsch, who initially was reluctant to go along with the scheme but soon gave in.

Major League (1989)

It seems only fitting in retrospect that Wild Thing was the song that played when Sheen's character came out of the bullpen - and that he has difficulty with control. As Rick "Wild Thing" Vaughn, Sheen did his own pitching and supposedly hit 83 mph on the radar gun. As he'd declare these days in one of his many exclamatory tweets, "Fastball!" The story of a Cleveland Indians team that plays better to avoid having the owner move them to Miami is still amusing today.

74K want to be Sheen's intern

How bad is the current job market? At least 74,040 people would like to work for Charlie Sheen.

Internships.com said Wednesday that that's how many people have applied to Sheen's internship position since he posted it Monday. The actor said he would pay someone to help leverage his social media network this summer.

The posting was also a paid advertisement from Internships.com. The application wasn't exactly extensive: It limited applicants to 75 characters or less.

On Monday, Sheen was fired by Warner Bros. Television from the hit CBS show Two and a Half Men. In a webcast Tuesday evening, Sheen lambasted the decision.

Actress Jennifer Aniston says some non-comedy movie projects are in her future, including a film based on the true story of an all-female countrywestern band that formed at a Texas prison in the 1940s

An actor who is on his game

• As in his new series Endgame, Patrick Gallagher seems to have a knack for making the right moves

The way Patrick Gallagher picks TV shows, he should be picking race horses. Every show is a winner, especially with critics. Besides Glee, he's either been a regular or had memorable roles on Da Vinci's Inquest, Entourage, Men of a and True ertain Age Blood.

The Canadian producers of his latest series are hoping the B.C. native's luck holds. The 42-year-old actor is set to star opposite Shawn Doyle in Endgame, a new Vancouver-based drama premiering March 14 on Showcase.

Doyle plays Arkady Balagan, a Russian chess master who refuses to leave a luxurious Vancouver hotel after the murder of his fiancé outside the front entrance. Gallagher plays Hugo Lum, the hotel's burly head of security tasked to toss the Russian for not paying his

Before you can say "checkmate," Balagan finds a way to stay solvent and not leave the premises: by solving crimes. By thinking several moves ahead, he ap plies his chess skills to detective work, drawing in helpers who act as his "pawns" around the hotel.

"I'm sort of his only antagonist," says Gallagher, interviewed earlier this year on the set of the series. Doyle and Gallagher do seem to relish their playful confrontations on the set. A scene set in front of the hotel lobby elevators produces laughs as take after take finds Balagan again holding Lum in check. It's like watching a tennis game where timing is the ball and nothing is out of bounds. "We developed that really early," says Gallagher. "It's been fun."

Doyle says Gallagher is a man of "great comic abilities" and admires the risks he takes to make Lum look lame. He says the character "tries to be smart, tries to be snave and swift.

and when he tries to be those things, he's even less SO

Over a relatively short career, Gallagher has acted opposite some of the biggest stars in show business. He played opposite Russell Crowe in Master and Commander: Far Side of the World and joined Sandra Oh - whom he has known since their days studying at the National Theatre School of Canada — on the film Sideways. The box office hit Night at the Museum put him in the company of Ben Stiller, Robin Williams and Owen Wilson

Spielberg cooking up another war epic

Here's a Metro first look at director Steven Spielberg's next movie War Horse, which is slated to be released Dec. 28, 2011. War Horse is an epic adventure set at the outbreak of the First World War about a young boy named Albert (Jeremy Irvine) and his horse Joey. Albert's father sells Joey to the British cavalry and Albert travels to the battlefields of France to bring Joey home.

With a divorce, flubbing the National Anthem at the Super Bowl and getting arrested for public intoxication, it hasn't been a great few months for Christina Aguilera, and some close to the singer think she's spiraling out of control, according to Star magazine.

"Christina's lost her confidence since she split from Jordan (Bratman.)" a source says. "She gets terribly sad, and that's when all the awful memories come flooding back and she ends up numbing herself with booze and food."

Friends also think Aguilera's new boyfriend, Matt Rutler, is "an enabler" and isn't helping matters. Rutler was arrested alongside Aguilera earlier this month.

"Everyone is worried sick," says a concerned friend. "She needs to get help before something even more serious happens."

Sheen sues for $100M

Charlie Sheen brought his verbal war against Warner Bros. and the executive producer of Two and a Half Men to the courtroom on Thursday, filing a $100 million lawsuit seeking to recoup his salary and wages for the show's crew.

The breach of contract lawsuit alleges production was halted on the CBS sitcom to punish Sheen for recent behaviour that has included two hospitalizations and, in recent weeks, a series of interviews where he has attacked executive producer Chuck Lorre

The filing comes four days after Sheen was fired from Two and a Half Men, leaving the top-rated sitcom's future in doubt.

Sheen's lawsuit alleges that Warner Bros. bowed to Lorre's desire to punish Sheen, and that the producer and studio conspired to blame the actor for causing production to stop.

Lohan turns down a new plea deal

PEOPLE. The day before she was due back in court for her felony theft charge, Lindsay Lohan rejected a plea deal made by the district attorney, sending her case to trial, according to Radar Online.

"Judge Keith Schwartz indicated he would give Lindsay less than the six months the DA was seeking, if she pleaded in front of him," a source tells the website. "(Lohan's lawyer) Shawn Holley was asking for no jail time, but the judge said he would sentence her to a minimum of 60 days, but likely not longer than 90 days. Lohan is accused of stealing a $2,500 necklace from a jewelry store.

Schwartz reportedly "encouraged Holly to discuss what not taking the plea deal will mean for her," according to the source. METRO

Around the world with Guinness

Believe it or not, more than one million pints of Guinness stout will be drunk across Canada this coming St. Patrick's Day.

If you think you're missing something in your glass because you're not having one in Ireland, you're wrong. If I learned one thing during my trip there last fall, it was that Guinness tastes the same from a tap in Belfast, Galway, Cork and Dublin as it does from anywhere in our country.

What you might have trouble believing is that the liquid inside a can of Guinness Draught (4 x 440 ml, $10.95 to $12.49) also tastes the same as a freshly poured pint from any tavern on the Emerald Isle.

Save your emails, beer geeks. I drank my body weight in the stuff during my weeklong trip — including one at the bar on top of the brewery itself — and couldn't tell the difference.

It's the nitrogen laden widget floating inside that allows the beer to keep its true Irish personality. Released when the can is opened the gas gives the brew its thick head and fresh-from-the-tap flavour. Sláinte!

Ottawa (24-34-9) is among the worst teams in the league, but the Senators can still surprise

Tampa Bay (38-21-8) has seemingly little to worry about heading into the post-season. The Lightning are in fifth place in the Eastern Conference, and 12 points clear of eighth place going into Thursday's games. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Defenceman Erik Karlsson scored twice in the last 8:48 and the Ottawa Senators beat the Florida Panthers 2-1 on Thursday

Former Florida backup Craig Anderson stopped 33 shots and came within 4:13 of his second shutout since being acquired in a trade from Colorado on Feb. 18. Anderson has started every game since going to Ot-

He outduelled his former goalie partner in Flori-da, Tomas Vokoun, who stopped 37 shots. Defenceman Clay Wilson scored for the Panthers.

Karlsson opened the scoring at 11:12 of the third, taking a loose puck along the boards, skating in on Vokoun and firing a quick shot from a sharp angle. The puck trickled in after getting between Vokoun's left arm and his body.

With Ottawa on the power play, Karlsson scored again with 5:10 left. Karlsson He put home a rebound after Vokoun stopped Sergei Gonchar's slap shot from the point.

Wilson scored his second goal in the last two games to close the gap to 2-1. He swept the puck past Anderson after Niclas Bergfors' pass toward the net was deflected.

Early in the third period, Ottawa killed a five-minute Florida power play after Francis Lessard was given a major and game misconduct for leaving his feet and checking Scott Timmins in the head area.

The Senators killed off four power plays in all, extending their streak to 31 consecutive penalty kills. Ottawa has won all three meetings this season. The Senators won the first one 5-3 on Oct. 28 and took the second 5-1 on Feb. 23 in Anderson's second game with the team.

Heat break out of slump in style against L.A.

HEAT

The first chore for the Miami Heat is done: They're in the playoffs.

That's no surprise. Snapping a five-game slide by beating the NBA's hottest team to get there, well, that might not have been what everyone saw coming. Chris Bosh scored 24 points, Dwyane Wade added eight of his 20 in the fourth quarter and the Heat ended their losing streak by beating the defending NBA champion Los Angeles Lakers 94-88 on Thursday night, the earliest Miami has secured a post-season bid in franchise history.

LeBron James finished with 19 points, nine assists and eight rebounds for the Heat, and Mike Miller scored 12 for Miami.

Kobe Bryant scored 24 points for the Lakers, whose eight-game winning streak was snapped. Pau Gasol added 20 and Andrew Bynum finished with 13 points and 12 rebounds for Los Ange-

Bosh - who said after Tuesday's loss to Portland that he would demand the ball more often in the low post — made six of his first seven attempts and had 16 points in the first

Miller added 11 by halftime, only the second time he'd reached double digits in the first two quarters all season, the other memorably being the 24point blitz en route to a 32-point effort on Jan. 22 against Toronto. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

T Aries March 21-April 20

Today's horoscope

Don't let others know what is going on in that busy brain of yours today. The Sun in Pisces at this time of year tends to make you more secretive.

¥ Taurus April 21-May 21 You won't be disappointed if someone let's you down today because you weren't keen on what you were going to do together anyway. If you have free time, use it well.

II Gemini May 22-June 21 Success in any worthwhile endeavour comes to those who know what they want and how to go about getting it. There are no shortcuts to the goal you have set yourself but because it is clear in your mind you'll reach it eventually.

Luthor

Make sure your mind is occupied today. It means you are less likely to dwell on doubts and fears that might hold you back. The game of life is easy. It's only people's silly insecurities that make it seem tough.

Ω Leo July 23-Aug.23 Someone will delight in telling you what you are doing wrong today and you won't be happy about it. Who are they to point out your failings? Well, they know what they are talking about.

TIP Virgo Aug. 24- Sept. 22 Sometimes, you can be too trusting and the planets warn you should think twice before giving anyone the benefit of the doubt today. Do they have evidence to back up their claims?

G Cancer June 22-July 22 ← Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23 Let other people run around after you for a change. You've done more than your share of errands in recent days, so put up your feet and take things easy today and over the weekend.

M Scorpio oct. 24-Nov. 22 It will pay you to seek advice today, especially if you have to do something you have never done before. Confidence won't be enough, so be realistic and get help from the experts.

→ Sagittarius

Nov. 23-Dec. 21 Not all is what it seems at the moment, so don't be too trusting and don't put all your eggs in one basket. One of the better times of the year is not far away, so there is no need to take any chances.

り Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 20

Stay calm and don't let anything get to you. Your emotions are close to the surface and that could spell trouble if you overreact to something that most other times you would not even notice.

Aquarius Jan. 21-Feb. 18 You seem to have doubts about a project on which you were keen a little while ago. Maybe it's your sixth sense warning you that it's not a good idea. You should listen.

H Pisces Feb. 19-March 20 Others are entitled to their opinions, but you call the shots. The more they say you're on the wrong track, the more you'll enjoy proving them wrong. @ SALLY BROMPTON
